

To Whom It May Concern:

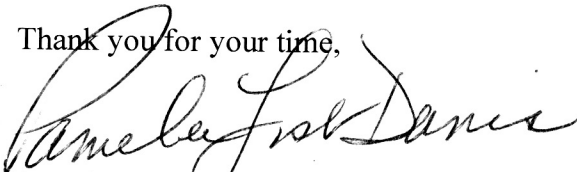

This letter is in reference to the wonderful group of Russians that came to our school in January of this year.

We have a Cultural Diversity Club at our school, which I sponsor. The visit of the group happened to coincide with that week. The group was able to perform for our Middle School and our High School, which added to the message that all cultures are very important to the global community as well as our All Saints' Academy community. It was so exciting to see the students interacting with the group on stage. Everyone enjoyed it immensely.

The group came to visit each of my classes and the interaction between the students and the group was wonderful. My classes learned so much about the culture of Russia. They also learned about schooling, customs, and dress. They found out they are more alike than different.

The students learned things that wouldn't have the same meaning if they read it in a book or newspaper. I believe this was a very important visit for our students and hope that the groups will be able to visit again next year.

Thank you for your time,
